Sankofa - Storytelling for the digital age - FREE Workshops - Staff

These three workshops explore Gender equality, racism and wellbeing in three separate online workshops.

In the first workshop, storytelling will be explored as a catalyst for anti-racist practice. The workshop begins by exploring the impact of discriminatory storytelling in storybooks, film and wider culture.

Attention is then drawn to how to counteract this impact by amplifying other perspectives and bringing intention and consciousness to language, description and storylines.

Farmer's Footsteps - Practical Action - KS1/KS2

Pupils are introduced to six farmers who live and work in the mountainous regions of Western Nepal. Each of the farmers has a different story to tell, but they all have a lot in common, they share the struggle to produce enough food to feed their families and to sell at market in a region affected by climate change.

This activity seeks to help children understand the human impact of climate change, but could also be broadened to highlight the link between farmers and produce and various environmental concerns.
