

DDE Newsletter No. 223

Climate Crisis – Climate Justice

The overshoot myth: you can't keep burning fossil fuels and expect scientists of the future to get us back to 1.5°C. Read more ...

'I don't want this landscape to change': the UK energy head making the local case for clean power. Faced with community anxiety over building for the energy transition, Energy UK's Emma Pinchbeck stresses the wins, near-term and far. Read more ...

Climate Q&A: Population, volcanoes and electric cars. Read more ...

Other News

In Dadaab, football is now the best medicine the refugee camp can provide. Kenya's Dadaab refugee camp has rapidly expanded in its 34 years, and now sport is one of the inhabitants' best hopes. Read more ...

'I've never felt so worthless': The pain of Deir el-Balah's obliteration. Read more ...

Trinidad and Tobago to remove Christopher Columbus ships from coat of arms. Read more ...

'An island of freedom': Inside the secret beauty salons of Afghanistan. In Kabul, an army of clandestine beauticians is keeping morale alive among women living in fear of the Taliban-led government. Read more ...

A coffee plantation in Brazil enslaved Africans. Centuries later, their descendants have taken over. São José do Pinheiro once stood out for its lavishness. Now a public space, it hosts a museum and a school of jongo, a tradition of music, dance, spirituality and storytelling. Read more ...

Local News ...

Exeter University has been awarded a two-star accreditation in the Fairtrade University and College Award. Read more ...

Mark 200 years of Cornish and Mexican links with special events across the Duchy. The legacy of the first Cornish communities to emigrate to Latin America will be celebrated across special events to mark 200 years of links between the Duchy and Mexico. Read more ...

Mussel farm could be reviving shellfish reef. A shellfish reef in Devon that was wiped out by bottom trawling fishing could be returning thanks to a mussel farm, a new study has suggested. Read more ...

Topics discussed at Thursday's World at Lunch

The Price of Getting Inked. Whether it's the expense of getting tattooed or the cost to have one removed, Americans are paying for their ink. Read more ...

'We were sure the Russian army would protect us': fury after Ukrainian incursion into Kursk. As tens of thousands flee their homes in border region, many say government downplayed threat of invasion.

Read more ...

Ancient oaks compete for Tree of the Year. A dozen centuries-old oak trees have been shortlisted.

Read more ...

Ambulances called to Amazon's UK warehouses 1,400 times in five years. GMB union urges Health and Safety Executive to investigate 'shocking' figures revealed by the Observer. Read more ...

Campaign Updates:

Debt Justice: Mozambique wins UK lawsuit against Privinvest over 'tuna bond' scandal. Read more ...